Acting Mayor Nye has vetoed the action of the council Tuesday night in granting a franchise to the Utah Home Telephone company.

He has approved the council's action in granting the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone company a new franchise to run thirty years. The veto and the signed ordinance were both returned to the city recorder yesterday morning. the city recorder yesterday morning. The vcto came as a surprise to the community, as it was confidently expected that the ordinance would be signed, the confidence being based on statements made by the acting mayor immediately after the council session. statements made by the acting mayor immediately after the council session, and from the fact that he was chairman of the law committee which prepared and reported favorably on the ordinance practically as it finally passed. The text of the acting mayor's veto message will not be given out till the meeting of the council next Monday, but it is known that various reasons are set forth, among them being sons are set forth, among them being one to the effect that the ordinance dinance was brought up for three readings in one evening. It is understood, to obtain one of the theatres for the presentation of the plece, but neither of the playhouses had an open date.

The object is to raise funds for the free kindergarten, and the prospects are that that end will be attained, as well as scoring a distinct artistic success. The costumes to be worn are many of them historic, and all of them works of art. The stage business and small details of the play will doubtless make a great hit. The ladies in the cast are many of them foremost in the philanthropic and charitable work

The remains were taken to the tabling a procession over a block in consisting of the memory, and later, at the city cemetery, take their last respect to her memory, and later, at the city cemetery, take their last farewell of her in mortality. The burial service was that of the Mormon church, of which she was a member, and it was conducted by Bishop C. R. Davis. "O, My Father" was beautifully rendered by John Baily, and another selection, "Consolation," was nicely rendered by a mixe's double quartette consisting of the M' rs Josie and Anna Frost. Mamile Bawden and Agnes Thompsen, and the Messrs. F. A. Christensen, Alf and John Baily and Tom Petersen. The Tabernacle choir also renc'ered some fine songs. The speakers picke very highly of the deceased and spoke comforting words unto the bereaved.

The leave-taking of the beautiful and gifted young woman was very sad, the mixtile of sorrow being drawn over the large assemblace of mourners in a manner that showed how deeply they regretted the death, of the departed, who had in life realized so much of a manner that showed how deeply they regretted the death of the departed, who had in life realized so much of sunshine and cheer in her faith. Hers was a merry and make merry disposition, and that she should have been cut down in the bloom of her life is one of those tragedies of life for which there is little accounting.

As her remains were lowered into the grave and the mound covered with floral emblems, eyes were moist and hearts were heavy in the bereavement that had culminated in the chapter of death that had had its final reading death that had had its final reading in the city of the dead. All felt im-pelled to say, "Peace to her memory; honor to her name."
